SIX-DAY RUNNER FAINTS ON TRACK.

Horst, of the Australian Team, Succumbs to Terrific Pace Set by Davis, the Mohawk Indian.

August T. Horst, the Australian, after putting up a game fight to remain in the six-day race with a bad ankle and a badly blistered foot, fainted on the track this afternoon from pain and had to be carried to his dressing-room.

Referee E. P. Weston, who had noticed the terrible plight of the Australian, was in, was directly behind him when he fainted. He had followed Horst entirely around the track and had advised him to leave. Horst was numb, and refused to go.

Diehl, who is Horst's partner, relieved him at once.

Cavanaugh, Joe Hurst, the Englishman, and Davis, the Indian, were the only men who kept up a steady sprint during the afternoon in the six-day race. They covered on an average six and a half miles an hour. One of the most pitiable sights was the attempt made by the old-time runners, Lepper Hughes, Sammy Day, George Noremack, George Cartwright, Pete Golden and John Glick, to keep up with the pace set by the younger runners in the contest. Hegelman, who replaced his partner Cavanaugh, shortly before 3 o'clock started off at a lively pace, which made the other leaders resort to the same kind of sprinting in order to not allow the speedy German to gain any laps on them.

At the end of the fourteenth hour of the race Hegelman and Cavanaugh were still leading the bunch, they being two miles and five laps ahead of Davis, the Indian, and his partner, Carroll. Guerrero, the Mexican, who has been participating in six-day races long enough to be retired on a pension, kept up his steady sprint and did so well that at 2:15 o'clock he managed to pass Myers and Dineen, having gained eight laps on them and crept up into third place.

Two teams dropped out during the early morning hours. The first to go were Elkan Gordon and Mike Lyons, known as the "Star Ward Team" of this city. At 8 o'clock Andy Cuno and

J. S. Morando, the Italian team, retired. The weakened ones will continue to fall by the wayside during the day for the pace is hot and only the strongest will survive.

The Indian Sprint.

The Indian, Davis, came on the track about 5 o'clock and loomed along for a spell to get limbered up. Then he started in to cut down Cavanaugh's lead. He sped around the awkward ring with remarkable grace and speed, and lap after lap he made up on Cavanaugh, but the Irishman never varied from a jog trot and appeared to pay no attention to the Indian. The crowd cheered the Indian on, and the feet-footed Mohawk covered ground with no apparent effort. Cavanaugh could not stand the pace and soon called for Hegelman to relieve him. Then the Indian lapsed into a walk and ate an orange.

A Killing Pace.

The men are on a trot most of the time they are on the track. It seems impossible that they can keep up this gait for six days even if they are only on the track twelve hours a day. There has been no let-up since the men started at midnight. The old G. A. veterans barns came out on the track shortly after 10 o'clock.

POOL-ROOM RAID IN PARKER HOUSE.

TUMULT IN BROADWAY HOTEL WHEN POLICE ACT.

Bettors in a Stampede and Actresses Living in the Place Frightened.

A raid was made by Detective Maher, of the Tenderloin station, this afternoon on a pool-room which was running in full blast in room No. 32 at the Parker House, Broadway and Thirty-ninth street.

The detective gained admittance to the place at 12 o'clock. Fifteen or twenty men were lounging around the room, which was furnished with all the paraphernalia necessary for pool playing. Bettors were being paid heavily on the New Orleans race. After seeing several wagers made, Maher grabbed a lively scuffle followed among the gamblers. They rushed into the hallway and down the steps at a lively clip.

The tumult created by the escaping gamblers around the guests of the hotel, many of whom were actresses, in a few minutes the different landings were filled with excited groups of women who were at a loss to understand the commotion.

They were told there had been a "raid" which added to the feminine excitement for the disturbed guests did not know that a poolroom had been established in the house. It was some time before the hotel manager could convince the women that the affair was a mere nothing to them.

The two men captured were taken to the West Thirtieth Street station. They gave their names as James Wilson, of Baltimore, and John J. Gordon, a telegraph operator, of No. 124 Baltic street, Brooklyn.

A bank-roll of $168 was found on Wilson.

DIED RATHER THAN RISK A FAILURE.

JULIUS ALTSCHUL KILLED HIMSELF WITH ACID.

Fearing He Would Not Get Certificate as Pharmacist at Coming Examination.

Fearing that he would fail to secure a pharmacist's certificate after months of hard study, Julius Altschul killed himself today by taking prussic acid. Altschul, who was thirty-two years old, had been employed as a sub-clerk in a drug store at Madison avenue and One Hundred and First street. All his spare time he devoted to the study of pharmacy, hoping to pass his examination within a short time. But of late he became despondent. He told his acquaintances that he feared he would fail, that all his family and friends were in Russia and that the bright dreams he hoped to realize in this country had vanished.

Instead of studying harder he brooded. He left the drug store this morning, giving the clerk two letters addressed to persons in Russia to mail for him. No trace of him was seen after that until his body was found in his little room at No. 62 East One Hundredth street.

JURY BLAMES MAJ. SHALER.

HOLDS HIM WITH MATESON AND EPPS RESPONSIBLE.

Contractor and Powder Man Held for Grand Jury after the Coroner's Inquest.

MAJOR IRA A. SHALER, Rapid Transit Sub-Contractor.
ERNEST J. MATESON, Engineer-General-Charge.
MORRIS EPPS, in charge of the powder shanty.

These three persons, the Coroner's jury decided today after an hour's deliberation, were responsible for the dynamite explosion at Park avenue and Forty-third street on Jan. 27 that killed six persons.

Coroner Goldenkranz announced that Major Shaler and Epps were held for the Grand Jury. Mateson was held in $5,000 bail.

Offense of Each Defined.
The jury verdict stated that Rodrick J. Robertson and others came to their death on Jan. 27, by an explosion of dynamite in the powder house of Ira A. Shaler, sub-contractor of the Rapid Transit tunnel.

Shaler was declared guilty of storing more than the legal amount of explosives in the powder house.

Epps was declared guilty of having a lighted candle in the powder house and being criminally negligent in caring for dangerous explosives.

Mateson was blamed for negligence of allowing the dynamite to be kept contrary to the law.

Coroner Goldenkranz after announcing the amount of Mateson's bail discharged the jury.

Coroner's Charge.
In charging the jury Coroner Goldenkranz said:

"There is some evidence that a candle was in the powder house and was kept burning at different times, and particularly on the twenty-seventh day of January, immediately prior to the explosion.

"There is also some testimony to show that there was in this powder house considerably more than 60 pounds of dynamite, the amount permitted by the law.

"If from all the evidence you find that Ira A. Shaler violated the law in permitting more dynamite to be stored in that powder-house than the law allows and if by reason of his neglect this explosion took place and killed these people then it will be your duty to find him responsible for their death."

Coroner Goldenkranz said, in conclusion, that if the jury found by all the evidence that Epps and any other person had been negligent they would have to find him or them responsible as well.

JURORS ESCAPE DUTY ON A NOVEL EXCUSE.

The $50,000 slander case of Meyer Strassburger against Henry S. Lowenthal went to trial this afternoon before Justice Costrane in the Supreme Court. A jury was secured and the trial adjourned until to-morrow. Both men were members of the Fidelity Club and the suit grows out of an alleged statement by Lowenthal that he had "heard that Bud Strassburger is caught cheating at cards at the Fidelity Club, and his resignation has been asked for." Lowenthal denies making the statements.

Among the jurors called and excused were Samuel J. Everett, of No. 2160 Seventh avenue, and William Thornton, of No. 505 West One Hundred and Forty-sixth street, clubmen, who said they thought such disputes ought to be settled out of court, and didn't believe in public mud-throwing.

ROOSEVELT BOY DELIRIOUS; TEMPERATURE IS INCREASED.

Typhoid Complication with Pneumonia Adds to the Chance Against Him—Experts Hurried from New York to Battle with Disease.

GROTON, Mass., Feb. 10.—Young Theodore Roosevelt's condition is even more serious late this afternoon than it was at noon. His temperature has risen considerably and as a result he is sometimes slightly delirious. These periods of delirium last only a few minutes, but because of the continued high temperature he is doing the greater part of the time.

Frequently when talking with his father and mother he drops off into a restless sleep which lasts but a short while. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt are constantly at his bedside. The President was away but a few minutes to luncheon, and Mrs. Roosevelt at the infirmary.

Bad Day for Boy.

"The boy has had an exceptionally hard day," declared Secretary to the President Cortelyou late this afternoon. "We can hardly expect improved conditions before to-morrow."

Dr. Lambert, the family physician of the President, who thoroughly understands the boy's constitution, has been called into consultation and will reach here late to-night.

Dr. Shattuck, who is attending young Roosevelt, expressed much surprise that the boy has not been delirious before to-day. All of the other boys similarly affected have been delirious and are only now becoming cognizant of what is going on.

Representative Lawrence called on the President this afternoon. To him the President said his son was suffering from a malignant attack of pneumonia. The disease has attacked young Theodore in its most acute form.

"The germs are hard to cultivate," declared Dr. Shattuck, "but live only six or seven days. I expect the crisis to be over within the next thirty-six hours."

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt have been buoyed up with hope by the doctors, who have told them that the boy's condition would be considerably worse as the crisis approached.

President's Plans Uncertain.

The President's plans are uncertain. He will remain here until assured by the doctors that his son's condition is no longer critical. Secretary Cortelyou is attending to executive business, having a long-distance telephone direct to Washington. The President's private car and engine still remains here, but it is unlikely that the President will leave before Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

The physicians attending the boy say that he is showing remarkable

SENATOR'S SON SHOT PLAYMATE.

YOUNG FAIRBANKS ACCIDENTALLY WOUNDS COMPANION.

News of the Shooting of Rev. Dr. Hamlin's Son Suppressed Until To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Robert Fairbanks, the fourteen-year-old son of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana, it was learned today, shot and dangerously wounded his little playmate, Francis Hamlin, son of the Rev. Louis Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant in this city last Saturday as they were playing together at the Fairbanks residence at Eighteenth street and Massachusetts avenue.

They are interested together in an amateur newspaper and do their editorial work and get out their paper in Robert Fairbanks's play room.

Having wearied of their newspaper work, the two boys went on an exploring expedition to the room of Senator Fairbanks' eldest son, who served in the Spanish war. Major Fairbanks has his room decorated with implements of war and souvenirs of his campaign. Among them is a large revolver.

Young Fairbanks showed his little companion how easy it was to load and unload a weapon. Young Hamlin examined it while he and then laid it aside to examine some of the other war trophies on exhibition.

While young Hamlin was thus engaged young Fairbanks picked up the revolver, and believing it to be unloaded, snapped it several times. The last time he snapped it an explosion followed. The ball, which was fired through the back of the neck of young Hamlin, who fell to the floor as if dead.

Servants were sent in every direction but could find no one who had seen the boys but in the mean time three other doctors had arrived.

The wound was dressed, and the little sufferer remained in the Fairbanks house over Saturday night, as it was thought best not to move him. Yesterday he was finally removed to the hospital, and Dr. Hamlin's residence, round the corner on Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Hamlin says today her boy is getting along nicely, and she hopes he may be able to be out in a few days.

The Fairbanks and Hamlin families endeavored to suppress any mention of the unfortunate affair in the newspapers. In view of the numerous sensational stories of the shooting the above was authorized by a member of one of the families interested.

HEART FAILURE.

Classes in Cornell Medical School, Where Koehler Was About to Be Graduated, Are Suspended.

Leopold Koehler, twenty-four years old, a student at the Cornell Medical School, Twenty-seventh street and Third avenue, dropped dead this afternoon in front of the school building. Heart failure was the cause.

Koehler lived with his parents at No. 321 East Sixty-ninth street. He had been a student in Cornell School for four years and was to have been graduated in June. The young man was a hard student and had weakened himself physically by devotion to his studies.

In company with a crowd of other students he went for luncheon this afternoon to a restaurant in Third avenue. As he reached the entrance to the school on his return he dropped to the sidewalk without a word of warning. An ambulance from Bellevue was on the ground in a few moments, but there was nothing for the surgeons or the friends of the young man to do.

The body was carried into the school and the Coroner's Office notified. Koehler was a general favorite and his death had the effect of causing a suspension of classes for the rest of the day.
